Ozone House helps fill the foster care gap

Articles printed on Sunday, April 1, highlighted an important gap in services for youth who “age out” of foster care. Thank you for providing this information to our community. I was dismayed, however, that you failed to mention the premier provider of the services these young people need: Ozone House. The staff at Ozone House provide housing and life-skills support to homeless young people in a variety of circumstances.

Over 20 percent of the youth they serve annually have “aged out” of the foster care system, like the young people you featured in your story. We are fortunate to have such a caring, effective and well-run organization in our county.

It is a shame that you did not use the opportunity of the recent articles to further inform your readership of Ozone’s services. Ozone can be reached at 734-662-2265.
